

WEEKLY SAVINGS SHEET

A weekly savings planner, or a savings "challenge", if you prefer to think about it that way, is a neat way to break down a savings goal into lots of small amounts that don't feel like a big deal on their own.

By reducing the individual amounts saved and making them more frequent, the amounts seem much more achievably, and much less of a sacrifice.

You can use either of the sheets on the next two pages. Decide which one works for you. The first sheet keeps track of how much you've saved so far, and the second one makes it simpler and easier to cross off each week as you proceed.

If you're starting this a little into the new year, there are two ways you can start off. You can save the first few weeks payments all at once, so that you'll finish at the end of December. Alternatively, you can start at the beginning and finish a little into the new year next January or February.

The important thing is to start. Today.

What will you do with £689 in 52 weeks?
